

SHAW'S SPEECH AT CONVENTION

Secretary Of Treasury Addresses Commercial
Congress At Kansas City, Mo.,
This Afternoon.

PREDICTS AN INDUSTRIAL FUTURE

Says The Age Of Trade Expansion Has Come, And We Must Prepare To Meet It In The Proper Manner
Befitting So Great A Nation.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 22.—George J. Kindel of Denver today created a stir at the Trans-Mississippi Commercial congress by introducing a resolution that because of certain rulings, which Kindel declared to be discriminatory, "Hon. Judge G. Clements be requested to resign from the interstate-commerce committee on account of incompetency and in the event of his refusal the President of the United States order an investigation and on satisfactory proofs of his charges demand his resignation." The resolution was referred to a committee. Like T. Pryor of Ft. Worth also spoke on "Live Stock Interest."

Sec. Leslie M. Shaw, speaking at Kansas City, Mo., at the annual session of the Trans-Mississippi Commercial Congress, today said in part: The eighteenth century and the first half of the nineteenth witnessed the world's greatest conflicts for the extension of territory. That the first half of the twentieth century will witness the world's greatest conflicts for the extension of trade is already apparent and only the thoughtless fail to observe.

To the better understanding of our relation to the world's commerce, a brief review of our achievements and an invoice of our commercial possessions are necessary. The first seven years of our existence were largely occupied in determining what was the proper expression, "United States" or "this United States." The case was tried and the court of last resort rendered its decision. The appointment settling for all time the question that the United States is "one and inseparable."

Following the determination of this all-important question came the problem of internal improvements and the development of our natural resources. We now produce more agricultural products than any country on the map; our mines yield silver literally by the trainload and gold by the carload; ships built in American yards and of American material unload more iron ore on the shores of a single commonwealth than any other country produces; we cut from our forests a hundred million feet of lumber for every day of the calendar year; our shops and factories turn out as much in finished products as those of England, Germany, and France combined, and we pay out in wages nearly as much as they do. Our railway system is the largest, the most complete, and our freight rates the cheapest; our coastwise trade the most extensive, the most rapid, the most efficient, and its rate the lowest of all the nations under heaven. One-seventh of the world's international trade originates with us, and one-tenth finds its way to our ports for ultimate consumption. While the people of 30 nations sell internationally twelve billion dollars' worth of merchandise per annum, the people of the United States sell the one to the other more than twice that much. We hold in our vaults 22 per cent of the world's supply of gold, and have in actual use more than one-fifth of the world's circulating medium. These achievements make us dizzy—these possessions dazzle.

Our imports quite promptly respond to, and therefore quite accurately measure, our prosperity. When our factories are in operation, when labor is employed, and farm produce therefore high, when our people are occupied, and therefore prosperous, our imports increase. They now exceed in amount per capita any previous period in our history. We therefore have only to guard our prosperity to make sure of our share of the import trade of the world. To the extent that our people are able to consume the world brings us its luxuries. We do not need to go after them.

Fruitful lands, productive mines, and multiplied factories have thus far failed to develop among us international merchants. It does not require international merchants to sell our surplus goods to countries that grow none and have no other place to rest that staple. It does not require international merchants to sell our surplus food products to countries that consume more than they produce when there is no other place from which they can be obtained. Now, as in the days of Joseph, a hungry people will go in their own conveyances whenever there is corn in Egypt or bread and meat in the United States, and the amount they will carry away will be limited only by the supply. Of our exports more than a billion can be left unguarded on our wharves and the world will come after it before it spoils, for the world needs it and can obtain it nowhere else.

This condition will not long continue. Our growing population will consume a steadily increasing proportion of foodstuffs, while our factories will steadily increase their demand for our raw materials, and therefore a steadily enlarging output of finished manufactures will be produced. It requires no prophet to tell us that we are soon to be confronted with a great surplus of manufactured goods, for which no market now exists.

It takes time to develop a market for manufactured goods. A few million extra bushels of wheat, a couple of million tons of meat beyond the usual demand, an extra million or two bales of cotton, will sell themselves, for the world will come after them; but to dispose of surplus manufactures will require international merchants.

England, Germany, and France consume approximately 30 per cent of their output of manufactured goods and they each search the world with ships flying their own flags to find markets for 20 per cent of surplus. We manufacture as much as these three countries combined, consume approximately 95 per cent of it all and invite the world to come after our surplus 5 per cent. In the near future this surplus will be larger, and the world may then fail to come after it.

Our population increases more rapidly than that of any other country in the world. A million immigrants annually reach our shores to share our matchless payroll, our factories multiply more rapidly than our farms, and at an early date we will have a surplus of manufactures expressed in billions instead of hundreds of millions. At present nearly 70 per cent of all our exports go to Europe and 47 per cent enter ports protected by a single flag. Does anyone suppose that our trade in these countries will increase as rapidly as the productive capacity of our people?

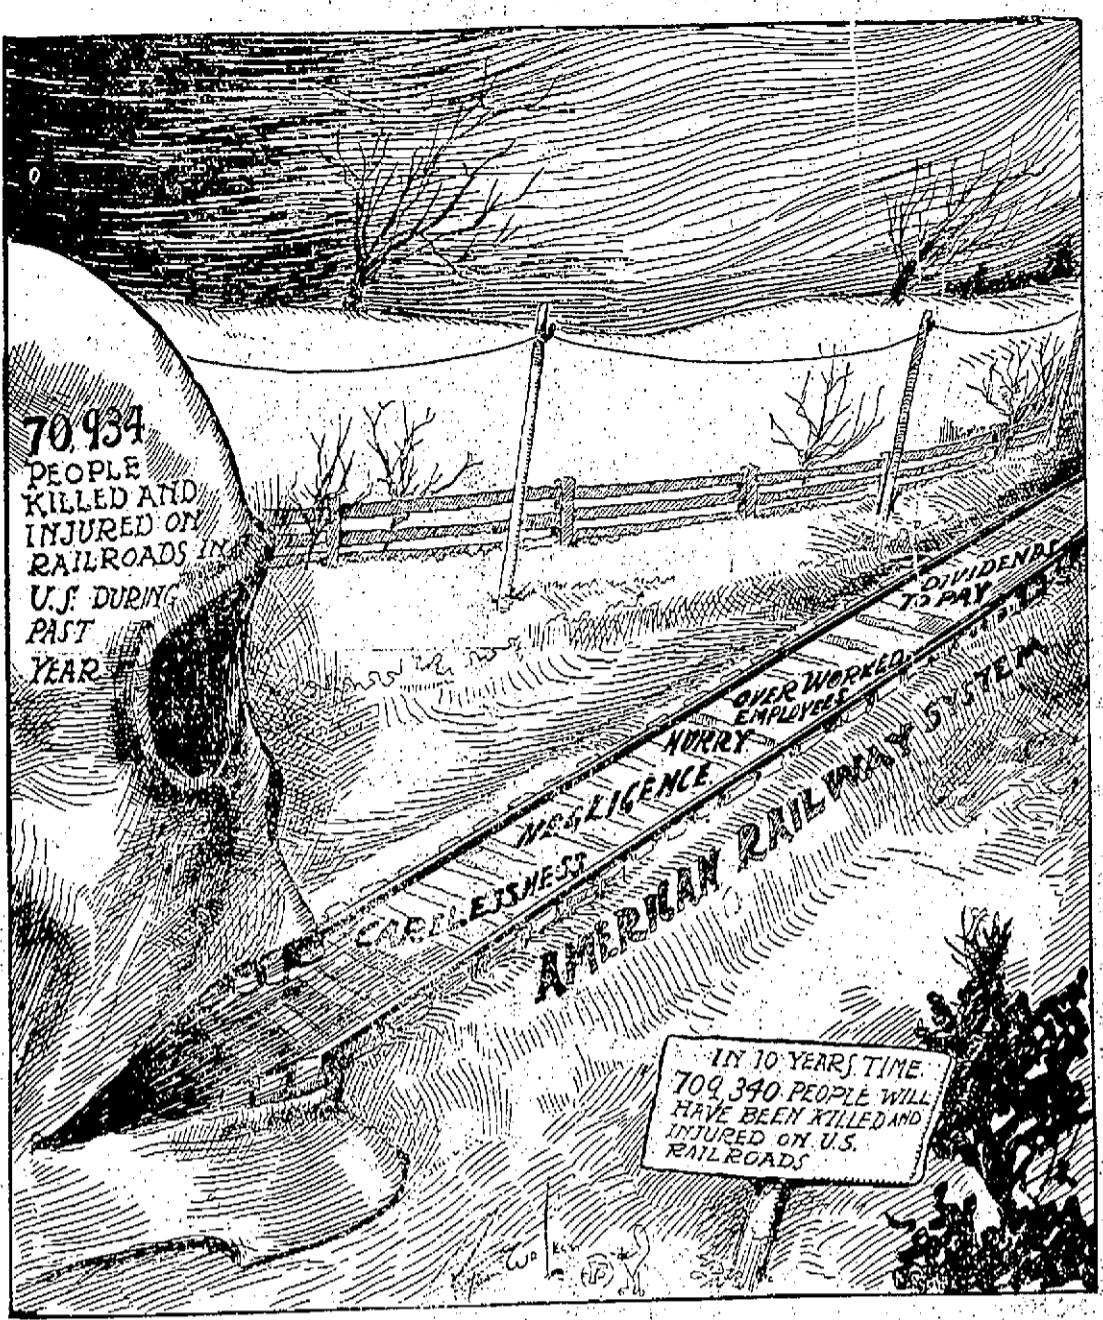

Europe will never be in a position to compete with us in the production of raw cotton or in food products or in lumber, or to any great extent in heavy machinery. We now sell all these things in Europe. But should we undertake to enter Europe with textiles and small articles of household furnishings, utensils, and other staple articles, we will signify that we reiterate the warning, we must develop new markets in which to sell our manufactures, for we can not unload them in the markets we now have.

The last half of the nineteenth century was occupied in developing our natural resources and in creating our matchless home market. Within the last decade our monetary system has been the subject of direct and affirmative legislation and special legislative attention has been given to our domestic commerce. Unequaled prosperity made possible the accumulation of great wealth and invited aggression on the part of corporate capital. This, also, has made the subject of special and affirmative legislation, and the enforcement of existing laws has attracted, in an unprecedented manner, the attention of the government. The next step, in my judgment, must be the development of new markets. Our present customers will not accept our surplus manufactures when multiplied, as they soon will be, by five, and perhaps by ten.

Where shall these new markets be found? The answer is easy, for there are but few places possible. South America and South Africa import $450,000,000 per annum, to which the United States contributes a paltry 12 per cent. Oriental countries import a thousand millions, to which the United States contributes a paltry 12 per cent. Our manufacturing competitors know where these countries lie. They have learned their languages, have studied their desires as well as their needs, and for years have prosecuted a well-planned and well-executed campaign for their commercial invasion, and with the aid of large merchant marine they have been very successful. We scarcely know where these countries are located on the map. We do not understand their languages, their habits, their needs, or their desires, and we send them all combined, less than one hundred and fifty millions of our more than thirteen billions of manufactures, and this pitance we send in foreign bottoms and beneath alien flags.

Let no man misunderstand me. I admire the foresight, the enterprise, and the skill of our foreign competitors, and bid them all goodspeed. No prosperity can come to any country that does not gladden my heart. I am contending only that we shall emulate their enterprise and enter these same markets with American ships laden with goods specially designed to meet the desires of the people as distinguished from our conception of what they ought to have. Every day we delay hastens the day when our surplus will set back upon us like a belated tide, to the inundation and swamping of our prosperity.

THE LATE FACTS
AS TO STATE AID

EXTRACT FROM BULLETIN IS-SUE'D BY STATE SOCIETY.

ON THE RURAL HIGHWAYS

What Could be Accomplished by the Aid of the State in Building Roads.

In an extract from bulletin on "Rural Highways" by the State Geological and Natural History Survey, just issued, the following will be of interest to Rock county people owing to the stand taken by the county board recently. The extract is as follows: State Aid.—The working of the plan of state aid in other parts of the country is given in Chapter II, Part II. The fact that without exception it has been successful wherever adopted is the strongest argument for its adoption in Wisconsin. The legislature of 1905 passed a joint resolution to amend the constitution, making possible the appropriation of money for state aid in road building. This joint resolution must be considered by the legislature of 1907 and if passed by them must be voted upon by the people before any money can be appropriated in Wisconsin to aid in building roads.

The effect of the adoption of such a system in Wisconsin can be judged by its effect in other states. Where the plan has been adopted the public spirit of the citizens has been aroused and their interest in the good condition of the roads excited to such an extent in some cases, as in New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts, that millions of dollars have been spent in improving the roads. According to most careful estimates the people have had more than these millions returned to them in the increased value of the land; and the investment of these vast sums has therefore been amply justified, even though they had to be built directly by the country districts through which they passed. The working of state aid, however, is such that the country districts through which the roads pass do not pay this full cost. In Wisconsin the assessed valuation of farm property is very probably approximately equalled by the assessed value of railroad and city property. Under state aid all the property in the state is taxed for the building of country roads, and therefore the country property bears only a part proportioned to its valuation. This expenditure of taxes raised upon cities and upon railroad property in the building of country roads is amply justified from any point of view. Railroads in many states have been so keenly interested in the building of roads that they have sent out experts and trains of machinery to build sample roads in districts along their lines. As a railroad official said at the building of one of these object lesson roads, "this railroad served the country for not over five miles on each side of its tracks (it was a southern railroad) and if good roads were built in the country it would serve the people within a distance of 25 or 30 miles. This would mean to his railroad an increase in business of several hundred per cent." In the same way were cities interested in the building of good country roads. The merchants of the cities in several parts of the state have given ample subscriptions for the purpose of aiding in building roads, to attract the trade of the country districts to them. While they have done this partly from philanthropic motives, no doubt there has been also back of their giving, the knowledge that they would receive this money back in the profits on increased sales of goods. It may at first sight appear to the ordinary dweller in a city who is not in trade that he is in no way benefited by the expending of taxes raised upon his property for the building of country roads, but this is entirely wrong, as a moment's consideration will show. During the National Good Roads Convention at St. Louis, Wisconsin's fair and speaker computed for the benefit of his audience that the city of St. Louis paid each year in excess freight upon goods delivered to them from the surrounding country in farm wagons a sum was paid by the city rather than by the farmers because of the well known fact that the "consumer pays the freight." In other words, the farmer must make a living and if it costs him a dollar more to haul a load of potatoes to town over a bad road than it would over a good road the persons who buy those potatoes must pay a dollar extra in order to give the farmer that which he has a right to demand for his labor. For these reasons, therefore, the application of state and county money raised by taxing not only farm property, but city property and railroad property as well, is justified, even in the consideration of actual cash returns.

The giving of state aid is also justified for the reason that it educates the farmer in the value of good roads and teaches him to build them for himself. This has been the case in every state where such a course has been pursued. State aid has not been sufficiently extensive to pay for its share of all the roads which the farmers desired and as a consequence after once experiencing the benefits of good roads they have gone ahead and built them at their own expense without waiting for state money.

Nowhere in the United States have good roads been built to any extent where the total cost has been borne by the farmers themselves. Some such means as state or county aid has been necessary to get the movement started so that people will build good roads, but after once started they have almost always gone much farther than state aid could allow.

The actual situation in Wisconsin with regard to money for state aid is different from that in any other state in the Union. This year (1905) the taxes levied by the state are the school taxes, the taxes upon railroads, and license fees which other corporations paid into the state treasury. Of this revenue there is returned to the towns and cities of the state money in the shape of aid to the schools, and the districts themselves have raised and paid into the state. In certain words, the state has levied a certain amount for school purposes which it has returned to school districts, together with certain money which it has levied upon the railroads and other corporations. The money left from the corporation fees and railroad taxes, after deducting the sums returned to the towns for school purposes, is sufficient to provide a large reserve in the treasury for the purpose of building the new capitol and paying all ordinary state expenses. Therefore if the state chose to appropriate money in road building such money would be in effect a gift to the towns. They would have this much in addition to what they might raise by taxing themselves. As far as known, in no other state is this situation possible, in which state aid can be granted without costing the people themselves one cent in taxes.

From this statement of conditions it is at once evident that the people of Wisconsin are losing a most excellent opportunity if they do not demand of their legislators that laws be passed adopting the plan of State Aid in this state.

Madison Man Would Be Free from Girl Who Does Not Love Him.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
 Madison, Wis., Nov. 22.—Alleging desertion because his wife chooses to stay with her mama, and cruel and inhuman treatment because she writes him letters denying that she ever loved him, John C. Haley, organist at the Baptist church here, has brought action for divorce against Winifred Voorhees Haley, to whom he was married last summer. The girl's mother came and took her away, and gave out a statement to the effect that the girl was driven mad and in a state of irresponsibility when the marriage was performed. Professor Haley was broken-hearted at first and made repeated attempts at reconciliation, but without success, and in his petition for divorce he sets forth a number of letters from the girl, in which she declares that she "never loved you, don't love you, told you so, and never can love you." The husband alleged that these letters and the desertion are ample ground for divorce.

Speaking on "The Relation of American Art to Democracy" before the Beloit West Side Monday Club, Rev. R. C. Denison of this city referred to the Rock County Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument in the Court House park here as a shaft lacking in artistic qualities, using the word artistic as a term for anything beautiful. He said that Beloit, Janesville and Rock county needed someone who possesses a knowledge of real art and has influence enough to be determining force whenever public money was to be spent for monuments. "Thus funds would not be misapplied," he spoke of the great Washington monument as a huge pile of stone that was doing no one any particular good and possessed no particular beauty. Speaking in particular to the club women of Beloit, Mr. Denison said he thought there

Common sense is just as necessary (even more so) in medicine as in business or the affairs of every day life. People are getting to know more than they used to. Not so long ago it was the fashion to make all sorts of claims for a medicine, and wind up by asking the reader to go to a drug store and buy a bottle. People won't stand for that kind of thing now. They want proof—tangible proof. They want to try the remedy first and if they find it to be what is claimed they will be glad enough to go and buy it.

A Convincing Argument.

That is why we say to every person suffering from piles or any form of rectal disease, send us your name and we will gladly send you a free trial package. For we know what the result will be. After using the trial you will hurry to your nearest druggist and get a 50-cent box of Pyramid Pile Cure, now admitted by thousands to be one of the most wonderful remedies and cures for Piles ever known.

Please excuse my delay in writing to you sooner in regard to what your Pyramid Pile Cure has done for me. I consider it one of the most medicines in the world for piles. I suffered untold misery for four months when my wife begged me to send for a box. When it was half gone I knew I was cured and it didn't take any begging to get me to send for a second box. I think I am about well now but I feel any symptoms of a return I will order at once. I order it from the Pyramid Pile Co. to be sure of the cure. Tell all about this fine remedy for piles.

"And there is anything in this letter you want to use so soon. I received your letter a few days ago. Yours for a remedy like Pyramid Pile Cure."

Waynawaga, Supt. C. M. Hayward of that institution, and Mr. Hiller, posed on top of their house-boat with the quarry of a four days' hunt extending from Nov. 1 to Nov. 4, inclusive. Between three and four hundred ducks—mostly canvasbacks—are strung up along the sides of the cabin and each nimrod is holding a good-sized string with his right hand. Mr. Hiller enjoyed a month's outing in the north and brings back the biggest (properly authenticated) duck story of the year.

MUST ECONOMIZE

At a meeting of railway presidents held in Chicago yesterday, in which all the principal roads of the country were represented, it was decided that an era of economy must be established, and that many plans for betterment contemplated, must be abandoned. This policy effects roads centering in Chicago to the extent of some sixty millions.

The reasons assigned by the railway men for this move in economy are increased demands of labor, which will cost the railways between $80,000,000 and $100,000,000 in excess of the wages paid last year; increased cost of all supplies and materials; scarcity of labor, making it almost impossible to secure men for extension of old lines and the construction of new; inability to get supplies promptly; the general tendency of freight rates, which, it is said, is downward, while the price of everything else is increasing; uncertainty regarding the effect of the rules of the interstate commerce commission; increasing difficulty in securing money to invest in railway ventures with which to carry on improvements, and continued public agitation, which is alleged to be hostile to corporations and to railways especially.

It is not at all surprising that railway managers have decided to go slow, and the reasons assigned are sufficient to warrant the movement.

Among the reasons mentioned is the difficulty in securing money to invest in railway ventures, because of prejudice, incited by long continued agitation against corporations in general, and railways in particular.

The Chicago & North-Western Railway company voted at its last annual meeting to increase its capital stock $100,000,000, and suspicion was immediately aroused because of the fear of a deluge from watered stock. The fear became epidemic in Wisconsin, for the Badger state has but little use for water in any form, and so the governor felt called upon to protect the people against a contingent flood. He has written the railway company for an explanation, and when it is received, and spread before the people in cold type, the spasm will subside, and reform will assume normal conditions.

Some things in this world are so apparent from observation, that they establish themselves by self-evidence, and no further explanation is demanded.

In the commercial and industrial world, where corporations are represented to the extent of 83 per cent, increased capital to meet the demands of rapidly developing business, is created, not occasionally, but always, by an increased issue of stock.

This is of such frequent occurrence that it excites no comment, and in all legitimate lines of business it is regarded as an evidence of growth and prosperity.

When permission is granted to increase capital stock the increase becomes treasury stock and is sold by the corporation as needed to meet the demands for new equipment and betterments. This property is improved and its earning capacity increased for the benefit of all the stockholders.

The Chicago & North-Western Railway company has bought property for a terminal station in Chicago, and is planning to spend twenty million dollars for permanent improvements in that city alone. The company is also contemplating extensions and betterments over its entire system, and the increase of capital would be absorbed in tangible assets for the protection of stockholders.

The general public is not well informed as to corporations, which are nothing more nor less than stock companies, and because of this ignorance, and the advantage taken of it by a lot of muck-rake reformers, prejudice prevails to larger extent today than ever before.

Secretary Taft favors a ship subsidy to the extent of government mail contracts, and claims that the United States can never secure her share of South American trade without it. He was much impressed with the possibilities of the southern hemisphere, during his recent trip, and suggests great opportunities for American capital.

Reform spelling is being generally endorsed, and the high school graduate of the future will be able to pass muster without criticism. It is now time to tackle vertical penmanship and attach a few more frills. With plenty of botany, Latin and Greek, the boy will find himself well equipped to handle a pick and shovel intelligently.

The rector of old Trinity church in New York has recently issued a note of warning on our loose divorce laws. He says that the United States has granted 500,000 divorces during the last twenty years, while Great Britain, with a population five times as large, has granted but 214,000. The figures are significant.

Reuf, the accused San Francisco hoodler, is liable to end his career in a place where his influence will not be demoralizing. Evidence secured against him is damaging, and his tool, the mayor, is also implicated. The city has needed purifying for a long time, and will be benefited by the investigation.

A little more publicity on the part of the Standard Oil Co. during its history as a corporation would have saved criticism, and might have averted the trouble now being experienced.

CARELESSNESS WITH KNIFE COST $5.90

Mrs. O. M. Anderson Paid Fine and Costs to That Amount for Assault and Battery This Morning.

Arraigned in municipal court this morning on the charge of assault and battery, Mrs. O. M. Anderson, a young woman about thirty years of age who resides with her husband and two children at the corner of Washington street and Mole avenue, at first entered a plea of "not guilty," but after her trial had been set for Monday, she amended her plea to "guilty." The trouble occurred about eleven o'clock Tuesday morning when the defendant, angered because Mr. and Mrs. Knoff, who were moving into the house adjoining her premises, had left a horse and dray hitched in front of her home, went out with a butcher-knife to cut the strap with which the nag was tied to the street-railway guide-wire pole. Mr. Knoff prevented her from carrying out her purpose and when she made a second attempt, Mrs. Knoff interfered. In so doing the latter is said to have sustained some slight wounds on the head and one of her hands. Mrs. Anderson disclaims any intention of slashing her opponent with the blade, and claims that the injuries resulted from the efforts to stop her from accomplishing what she set out to do, viz., cut the strap. The knife in question was rather dull, but it might have inflicted a serious injury had it been drawn across the face, as one of the bystanders claims it was going to be just as he took a hand in and stopped the melee. Judge Piffard imposed a fine of $5 and costs, amounting in all to $5.90, which were paid.

ELECTRICITY FOR BUILDING WINCH

Motor Will Run Hoist at New Tobacco Warehouse of M. F. Green and Sons.

For the first time in the building history of the city electricity will be used to operate a winch when active operations are resumed at the new tobacco warehouse being erected on North Academy street by the firm of M. F. Green and Sons. Hand power or a gasoline engine has been used in the past but a motor is being installed at the Green warehouse and will supply power to hoist the building material to the upper stories. The advantage of electricity over gasoline is the absence of noise and vibration. There has been much delay in the building of the new warehouse because of the non-arrival of material. Lumber which was shipped the second of October did not arrive until yesterday but work is to go on with a rush now and the building will be completed before last winter sets in.

EX-GOV. SCOFIELD A VISITOR IN CITY

Spent Several Hours in Janesville Between Trains Today—On a Business Trip in Locality.

Ex-Governor Edward Scofield of Oconto spent several hours in the city today. "I had some business in the southeastern part of the state and stopped over between trains in Janesville," he said to a reporter who interviewed him at the Hotel Myers. "These southern Wisconsin cities are all good substantial places and in this they differ from our northern lumber towns, some of which are a trifle on the down grade just now. Janesville is one of the old cities of the state and even if it seems to be forging ahead slowly, its future is secure. It is some years since I was here last." The former governor appears just as active and vigorous as he did ten years ago, though many heavy public and private burdens have been his during that time.

MODERN RAFFLES IS CAUGHT IN MONTANA

Formerly Lived at Orfordville Where His Wife Now Resides—Fleece Everyone.

J. Gordon Morse, the much wanted forger, formerly a resident of Orfordville, who has demonstrated that the big piano corporations can be fooled, that bankers will buy forged notes, and that dealers are as well susceptible, is under arrest in Montana, and will be brought back to Madison for trial. Morse has been in Janesville often but it is not known he victimized any Janesville merchants with his schemes. It is probable that he has not sold any pianos here either but the real facts of this case cannot be learned until all the details of crimes is made public.

Victim of Blackmail.
It is now asserted that Morse was the victim of blackmail himself, it is hinted that he was an ex-convict and paid money to some person who had knowledge of this. It is known he told Orfordville people that he had a cousin by the same name as his who served time in a penitentiary, but it is now thought he and his cousin are synonymous. Morse is being held on a warrant issued by Colwin Smith of Madison, who has much business in Janesville where he has sold many pianos; he was one of the men Morse "did" on fake sales and forged notes and will be the chief witness against him. Mrs. Morse is from Orfordville and it was at that place she met and married Morse two years ago. Their subsequent married life, according to Mrs. Morse, was of the happiest. He was solicitous for her wants, at all times, kind and generous. This was true and yet there was a cloud that hovered over their home which caused Mrs. Morse much thought and made Morse gloomy at times.

Known of Blackmailers.
This cloud was a blackmail. Mrs. Morse had known of this person's existence almost from the first. At frequent intervals Mr. Morse had been approached and a demand for money had been made and the money paid. As to whether the blackmail was a man or a woman, Mrs. Morse was ignorant. She was also in the dark concerning the nature of the proposed disclosure for which Morse paid money for silence.

Mrs. Morse told the story to a friend after the disappearance of her husband and the discovery of his crimes. At that time she asserted her allegiance to Morse and said she thought him to be suffering from temporary insanity. It is now thought by the police that there may be some truth in Mrs. Morse's theory. It may have been that the continued persecutions of the blackmailers and the threatened ruin of his home and happiness had driven him desperate and he had concluded it was as well to have the name as the game and started on his career of crime.

Police Seek Cause.
The question that is being asked by the police is, what was the thing that the blackmailers threatened to expose? What was it that was black in Morse's past life? The rumor has reached the police that the man is an ex-convict. But there is no foundation for the story. It is also surmised that he may have another wife and that she was the blackmailers. Certain it is he was the most mysterious criminal that has interested the local police and his crime seemingly the most irrational.

Later developments point to Morse's having served a term in the penitentiary some time previous to his locating at Orfordville. Even while in that city he had at one time explained his lack of funds to his wife by stating:

"I have a cousin by the same name as myself, J. Gordon Morse. He has been in the penitentiary and it cost me a great deal of money to get him out."

It is now thought the alleged cousin was J. Gordon himself.

Fleece a Co-ed.

Almost daily a new deal of J. Gordon's is brought to light. The latest has to do with a young lady attending the university. Morse rented her a piano at the rate of $15 a year. He forged the young lady's name to a note of $350, the price of the piano, and turned it over to the house.

In this way Morse secured a commission for a sale. The house will assume possession of the instrument, having lost only the agent's commission.

MUST BE SOLVED BY SIMPLE ARITHMETIC

Algebra Should Not Be Used in Seeking the Answer to the Skidoo Puzzle.

The past week has seen a decided improvement in the wording and general composition of skidoo answers. Contestants are using more time digesting the famous problem more thoroughly and demonstrating the fact that the correct solution is not to be arrived at by a casual observation. The Puzzle Editor finds that some answers show the participants to have given too much attention—they have entered too deeply into mathematics and are solving skidoo by algebra. The correct solution may be found in simple arithmetic and must be answered in this way. The new bright pennies—500 of them—draw attention in the Badger Drug Co. window. The person who has not made a trial should do so before the contest draws to a close.

Despite the fact that the local high school team is anxious to meet Madison or Oshkosh, the two strongest teams in the state, on Thanksgiving day there is little possibility of such a contest occurring. Both elevens have tied Evansville but the locals have gained much in speed and team work since that no score game. Some seventy-five tickets to the Fort have been disposed of and it is expected that fully one hundred rooters will accompany the team.

Officials Who Harm Football

Neglect to Enforce Rules Strictly May Ruin Game.

Rules Committee Aimed Particularly to Wipe Out This Evil.

Incompetent officials, or, worse still, men who will not enforce the 1906 football code, threaten to ruin the good work of the rules committee in improving the pigskin game.

This class of men did much to bring odium on the old game, and many times the rules were blamed for rough and brutal play when the fault lay not in the gridiron code, but in the officials selected to see that the rules were enforced.

It has been common gossip for several years that certain referees and umpires could be depended upon to permit rough and foul tactics without interference or infliction of penalties.

Under the new rules and the efforts made by the committee to secure reliable men for the positions it was hoped that this would be overcome.

Unfortunately it appears that this is more of a dream than a reality. The average referee and umpire in the games to date appear to be incompetent, to say the least. The penalties announced for the infringement of rules have frequently not been enforced, and direct violation of the rules have been permitted.

In many cases the officials have been allowed to interpret the rules to suit themselves. An instance occurred in the Princeton-Cornell game in New York when Quarterback Dillon of Princeton was ruled off the field for slugging in the second half. His action was witnessed by dozens of the spectators in the stands, and he was roundly hissed as he walked to the side lines. Rule 22, paragraph B, distinctly prohibits the striking of an opponent and provides as a penalty for such offense half the distance between the point of down and the offending team's goal line in addition to the disqualification of the player who violates the rule. It is provided that the offending side may decline to accept the enforcement of the ruling, which is a weak point, for the captain of the team whose player is struck frequently considers it sportsmanlike to decline to receive a long gain as a result of the ruling. It is provided that the offending side may decline to accept the enforcement of the ruling, which is a weak point, for the captain of the team whose player is struck frequently considers it sportsmanlike to decline to receive a long gain as a result of

MAY PROVE FATAL

When Will Janesville People Learn the Importance of It?

Backache is only a simple thing at first. But when you know 'tis from the kidneys.

That serious kidney troubles follow: That diabetes, Bright's disease may be the fatal end.

You will gladly profit by the following experience.

'Tis the statement of a Janesville citizen.

Mrs. W. Johnson of 127 Pearl St., Janesville, Wis., says:

"For a long time I had severe pains in my back that must have been due to some disorder of the kidneys. It was almost constant aching and misery in the small of my back and became so severe at times that I was almost prostrated. Numerous remedies which I had seen highly recommended by the People's Drug Company, after using this remedy for a short time I found complete cure, and the trouble has not returned."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Mulburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

It is however, the rules are worth observing there should be no loopholes to nullify the working. In the game in question there was no apparent effort made to enforce the penalty, and after the contest it was said that the officials forgot to impose one.

In the middle west they believe the rules were made to be enforced, for recently the Michigan eleven lost fifteen yards in a big game because Coach Yost, in his excitement shouted some advice to the Wolverines.

Another common infringement consisted in permitting dozens of human legs, carts to parade up and down the side lines, during the progress of the game.

Rule 22, paragraph A, states that not more than five men shall be allowed to walk up and down on each side of the field. The rest, including substitutes, water carriers and all others, must be seated. Not the slightest attempt has in many cases been made to enforce this rule, and at several eastern games there were dozens of fat men waddling up and down the edge of the playing field, while spectators, who paid to see the game, had to take chances on being able to find a peephole in the wall of deadhead humanity.

The rules are not worth the paper they are printed on unless they can be enforced.

Kaufman Made of Champion Timber

Billy Delaney's Protege Showed Great Power In Berger Fight.

Al Kaufman is another proof that Billy Delaney, manager of Jim Jeffries, knows a fighter when he sees one. Delaney picks Kaufman as another heavyweight world beater, and his recent victory over thirty Sam Berger in ten rounds in San Francisco shows Al to be the real hot kid.

Berger is a strong, keen, knowing fighter, but Kaufman poked him around the ring smartly in every round but two or three.

The affair was replete with lightning changes, each man appearing on the point of winning more than once. Their eagerness to put each other out of business gave the bout an amateurish tinge at times, and the excitement of the thing no doubt robbed each of them of considerable of their strength as the contest wore on and caused the blows they landed to be as weak as water.

The third round was one that Kaufman will remember probably all the days of his life. Up to this time Berger had kept his trusty right in reserve. An opening occurred during a little tilt at close quarters, and Sam brought into play as pretty a right cross as ever was sped. It cracked against Kaufman's jaw, and Kaufman went to the floor.

When Al arose his most sanguine friend would not have given a silver dime for his chances. He was flogged from side to side and from ropes to ropes, being knocked down no less than five times in all. He weathered the storm, however, though he remained in his stride as he made for his corner when the going called for a halt.

In the minute's rest it is more than likely that the veteran Billy Delaney whispered words of warning and advice in Al's pink ear. In any case, when Kaufman took the scratch he crooked and held his guard high. An improvement was immediately noticeable in his blockings. Many of Berger's best meant blows bounced against the blacksmith's forearm, and between times Al was tearing punches into Sam's short ribs.

The seconds had to lift Berger when the tenth and last round began. The lads went in and began to slug, but Berger had no strength to speak of in his punches, and Kaufman certainly had a very blacksmith's wallop.

Berger clasped Kaufman about the waist with both hands, and Welch had to pull him away. They went close together again and struck each other, Kaufman hammered at the stomach, Berger was sinking to the floor head first when the towel was thrown up at his corner.

Strangely enough, since the fight with Berger, Kaufman is not talking fight. He has announced that in deference to the wishes of his family he will put in a year at school. When his determination was first made known some thought it was a school of singology that Al was bent on entering, but this is a mistake. It is books and maps that will furnish him with himself with for a year and not straight letters and newspapers.

It all that was said recently were to be taken as final it would look as though Berger and Kaufman are lost to the ring for a long time.

It is estimated that about $25,000 changed hands over the Kaufman-Berger contest. At the last moment Kaufman money was so plentiful that the young blacksmith became the favorite at odds of 10 to 8.

The Clarke rumor again. Report that Pittsburgh Captain is to Retire From Baseball.

Is Manager Fred Clarke going to quit the Pittsburgh baseball club? The only man who can answer this is Clarke himself, and he keeps out of sight. Regularly about this time every year the story is sprung that the great baseball general intends retiring and devoting the remainder of his days to his farm in Kansas.

Recently a report was sent out to western papers by a correspondent traveling with the Cincinnati club to the effect that Clarke and President Dreyfuss had agreed to disagree and that at the close of the present season the great manager would sever his connection with the Pittsburgh club.

It has been known for some time Clarke has been anxious to get out of baseball. The man who has piloted the Pirates ever since the consolidation of the Pittsburgh and Louisville clubs is well fixed financially and could well afford to drop out of baseball if he felt so inclined.

BLAME PUT ON DEAD MAN. Mate of Steamer Dix Responsible for Her Sinking.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 22.—That Mate Dennison, who was one of the 50 or more persons who perished with the sinking of the steamer Dix, was wholly to blame for the loss of the vessel Sunday night is evident from the testimony taken before the United States marine inspectors Wednesday.

Capt. Lermond, master of the Dix, who was among those saved by the steamer Jeanie, testified that he had warned Dennison never to attempt to cross in front of another vessel but to pass at the steamer's stern.

MIXED HIS BUSINESS UP. Absentmindedness Badly Marred Solemnity of Occasion.

Not far from Worcester, Mass., there lived some years ago a man who combined the business of rural undertaker with that of miller. He had spells of absence of mind that were dangerous to his dignity when in the presence of death. One of these spells was upon him when he was officiating at the funeral of a worthy woman who had been one of the most popular leaders of the country society.

The funeral was at the home of the family, and more people attended than could be seated inside the house, so many were standing about the entrance when the time arrived for consigning the body to the hearse.

The man who assisted the undertaker, in the capacity of driver both at funerals and about the business of the grist mill, exulted in the name of John Smith. He was sitting on the funeral car down the road when his superior bowed out from the doorway of the house of mourning. "Bring up your wagon, John; we will load the grist!"

It was the last call the undertaker in question had to bury any of that particular family.

HOUSER WOULD SEE THE TOGA DESCEND

Present Secretary of State Has High Ambition for the Next Senatorship.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Walter L. Houser, secretary of state of Wisconsin for the past four years, and successful candidate for a nomination for a third term, has shied his castor into the ring again, this time as a candidate for the seat in the United States senate now occupied by John C. Spooner. The first suggestion of this candidacy came a few days ago, when Mr. Houser's chief clerk, C. K. Lush, said he knew of no reason why Mr. Houser should not be a candidate, and told how half a million dollars or more had been added to the state revenues by the care and aggressiveness with which the secretary of state had enforced the laws taxing corporations and also the new inheritance tax law. The suggestion was surprising and some people refused to take it seriously, but it is now recognized that Mr. Houser will make a most effective campaign. He will gain strength, his friends say, through two main reasons: his administration of the office of secretary of state, and his stand in the interests of the farmers in demanding lower railroad rates for their products. Some advantage is also expected out of the "martyrdom" of Mr. Houser—his arrest and acquittal on the charge of offering a bribe of $2,000 of campaign money of Insurance Commissioner Hunt in exchange for a certain decision in favor of a great insurance company. Mr. Houser demanded trial when this "expose" was made, and he was found by a jury "not guilty." It is acknowledged that Mr. Houser is a most "practical" politician, and he will make such a campaign that will convince his opponents that he is a powerful factor in the race. He is one of the most popular men with a large number of people in this state, and at the same time has made many bitter political enemies. Even his enemies admit that he is a clever organizer and manager of campaigns. He is a practical farmer, takes pride in producing fancy stock and exhibits extensively at state and county fairs. He is also a newspaper publisher and is proprietor of a country weekly, but for the past years, nearly a score of years, his great business has been that of a politician, and, moreover, he has been in lucrative offices much of the time. He is associated with Senator La Follette politically, and it is possible that he is La Follette's choice for senator.

TOWN FINDS PRICE OF GREATNESS HIGH

German Village Faked Population and Now Suffers by Higher Tax Levy.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Berlin, Nov. 22.—The Strasburg newspapers tell an amusing story at the expense of the authorities of a small village on the grand duchy of Baden. These worthies, it seems, full of local patriotism, were anxious to show at the recent census a population of over 1,000, but the minutest preliminary count failed to raise the total over 993. As the village is located in an out-of-the-way corner of the grand duchy, the chance of the desired total being made up by an odd visitor or two and a few tramps, was considered extremely remote, and the burgomaster was in despair. In the nick of time, however, a band of gypsies arrived, who brought up the total to 1,005. Never were gypsies made more welcome. Used as they were to harsh rebuffs, the swarthy wanderers were bewildered by the receipt of all sorts of pleasant attentions, and proudly the villagers saw their hamlet inscribed on the roll of "places of more than 1,000 inhabitants." But a sad awakening was in store for them. A new law was passed in Baden increasing the fiscal responsibilities of places with a population of 1,000 or more, and so the villagers found themselves saddled with taxes which, but for their unfortunate vanity, they would have escaped. There was the inevitable revulsion of feeling, and the burgomaster's lot has not been a happy one since.

SENSATIONAL SUIT FOR DIVORCE IS ON

Clergyman Named as Correspondent and Custody of Fifth Child is Not Sought.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Washington, D. C., Nov. 22.—The suit for divorce brought by Charles C. Bassett, of the geological survey, against his wife, Fanny Rice Bassett, the daughter of former Senator Rice of Arkansas, in which the Rev. Lawrence Hunt, pastor of the Noble Street Presbyterian church, in Brooklyn, is named as co-respondent, was called for trial today before Judge Gould. The trial promises to be sensational, for it will involve in one way or another several persons conspicuous in the social and official life of the capital. Mrs. Bassett, who is now living in Omaha, where she has brought a suit against her husband, will not contest the present suit, it is said. It will be fought solely by the co-respondent. His Brooklyn congregation, it is understood, has agreed to suspend judgment on him until the conclusion of the case. Bassett asks for the custody of four children, but makes no claim regarding a fifth child, which bears the name of Lawrence Hunt Bassett.

THREE WEEKS FOR TARIFF DISCUSSION

Canadian Parliament Opened and One Week Will be Devoted to Address From Throne.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 22.—Parliament opened this afternoon with the usual ceremonies. The principal part of the parliamentary program will be the revision of the tariff. It is expected that the speech from the throne will be adopted after a week's discussion, so that there will be about three weeks left before the adjournment for the Christmas holidays to debate tariff. On resuming early in January parliament will then be in a position to proceed with a consideration of estimates, as by that time departmental reports, which are somewhat delayed this year by reason of a short parliamentary recess, will be before the House. It is hoped that prorogation will take place by the middle of April.

Bishop Fawcett to Speak.
Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 22.—The Rt. Rev. Edward Fawcett, bishop of Quincy, is in the city for the purpose of delivering an address this evening before the Church Club, of the diocese of Kansas City. Bishop Fawcett has selected as the subject of his address, "Henry VIII, Not the Founder of the Church of England."

STUDENTS SEEKING SEVERAL BIG GAMES

University Football Adherents Think Time Has Come for Action.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Nov. 22.—Encouraged by the successful football season just closed at the University of Wisconsin, as well as by the good prospects for a strong team next year, students here are organizing a movement to prevail upon the athletic authorities to reestablish relations on the gridiron with Chicago and Minnesota, and hope is growing that Minnesota can be secured for a place on the Wisconsin schedule. Students here do not seem to care much whether Michigan is played by Wisconsin or not, and are careless about the announcement that the Wolverines are looking for eastern conquests.

Only Clark, Gelbach and Johnson of this year's varsity team will not be here next year. Possibly Bleyer will not return, but he will be eligible if he does come back. All the other players who were classed as "regulars" have said they would be in the bunch when the coach calls them out next September.

Another thing sought for is the resumption of the policy of maintaining a good freshman eleven, as a developer of material for the varsity team. This plan was followed here for three seasons previous to the present, during which years E. S. Driver handled the youngsters. This season the faculty allowed no organized freshman team with a schedule for games with outside school teams. However, the wisdom of the plan of training the first-year men is shown by the fact that all but four of the regulars this year were members of one or another of Driver's teams. Springer was the one new development this year, playing a good game at quarterback. Driver never coached Clark, Johnson or Bleyer, but every other man on the varsity squad learned football under the tutelage of Freshman Coach Driver. Among these were Messmer, Frank, Rogers, Curtin, Howard, Soukup, Zeisler, Gelbach, Stelhm, Lorenze, Miller, Dittman and Cunningham.

CUT DOWN PEOPLE WHO HANGED SELVES

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Paris, Nov. 22.—Pere Echivard, one of the most curious characters of the Montmartre district, has just died. The old man, whose humble occupation was that of a street porter and messenger, was known far and wide by the sobriquet of "the cutter," not because he was in any way connected with the tailoring trade, but because none understood better than he how to cut down a person who committed suicide by hanging. No one exactly knew how and where he had acquired his training, but his ability in "scientifically" dealing with such unfortunate cases was undisputed and almost proverbial. His services were constantly called for by the police. When he died he left written recommendations concerning an understudy of his, a fellow porter, who, he wrote, was worthy of succeeding him. In fact, to use the old man's own words, his friend needed only a little more practice in cutting down bodies to be absolutely perfect.

which is now our host.
We are told that if we will import more we will have no difficulty in exporting any and all possible surplus. Last year we imported $14.50 per capita, but this liberality in purchasing unequalled in amount helped in no perceptible degree to increase our exports. We bought of Brazil, for instance, half she had to sell, while Brazil sent us for 11 per cent of her imports. I do not blame Brazil. Brazil, like other countries without ships or international merchants, buys that which is brought to her doors. Our ships never enter her ports. She never sees our flag. Our consular reports are filled with information to the effect that no South American country has more than heard of the United States as a commercial country.
We buy of tropical and subtropical products a million dollars per day, more than we sell in tropical and subtropical countries. We sell to Europe a million and a half a day more than we buy from Europe. These facts afford a complete answer to the claim that if we will but import more of what we now purchase we will have no difficulty in selling our surplus however large it may become. We sell nearly half our present surplus to the United Kingdom, but in buying we select from what is offered that which pleases us best, regardless of its origin.
Argentina has just subsidized a line of steamers with which to market her surplus rather than to send it under foreign flags in competition with her neighbors. Where does she send these ships? To Europe, of course, for of Europe only has she heard in a commercial way.

If this country ever develops international merchants it will accomplish it by granting them encouragement, not alone by dredging harbors and deepening channels, but by insuring them a merchant marine in which to carry under the most favorable terms, the products of our farms, our mines, our forests, and our factories. And without international merchants sustained by a merchant marine we will never put these products into the ports of countries unable to maintain merchant ships with which to come after them. The outlay of $50,000,000 in the purchase of the right of way, and $200,000,000 additional in the construction of an isthmian canal, $200,000,000 spent in the last decade on rivers and harbors in aid of shipping, and $15,000,000 expended in the revenue-cutter service, largely for the protection of shipping, are all wise appropriations. A fraction of this amount would give us what we once had—a merchant marine—and insure us international merchants and the products of our ever-increasing labor would then be carried where the United States as a commercial country is now unknown.

We buy our linens from New York's great importers, in large quantities, which entitles us to the lowest prices.

Rubdry Bath Towels

Special window display during the Linen Sale. We are sole agents here. Prices 25c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, less 1-10.

Never wind a Rubdry Bath Towel around the water pipe, you'll make the meter run too fast.

Use a Rubdry Bath Towel, and keep the pores of the skin open. They give that "new man" feeling.

If Rubdry Bath Towels don't please you, don't mention it, lest people think you are queer. The trouble must be with you, not the towel.

10 per cent off during Friday and Saturday on all Linens.
